false and malidious libel, for which he has to pay the penalty, and considering all things that penalty, even as it stands, is no light one. Mr. Nexson, on the other hand, has cleared himself of a damaging imputation and set himself right with his directors and the public. Perhaps the most salutary effect of this cause collebre, however, will be to once more remind the public that letters written incantiously or in anger with the attempt to undermine a man with his employers are apt to recoil on the head of their author. If the defendant felt that a wrong had been done to him by Mr. NELSON he should have resorted to the proper means of redress. He chose to go another way to work, the outcome of which was the trial in Court just concluded. He cannot fail to regret his action.

by the end of the year 1874 Russis was covered with a network of secret societies. Their agents circulated Socialist dootrines among the people under pretence of tesching them to read and write, and learned carpentering and shoemaking in a building specially hired for the purpose so as to enable thom to enter the workshops and spread revolutionary opinions among the artisans.

The most active of the Nihilist agents in St. Petersburg was Prince Krapotkin. Many persens of mature age, fathers and mothers of families in good circumstances, were active promotors of the revolutionary agitation. A very wealthy lady named Subotin urged the farmers. and labourers on her estates to join the movement. Young girls of good family went into the fields to spread revolutionary opinions among the peasantry, and slept under the same roof with the agricultural labourers. Such cases were, says the report, very numerous. It was expected that war would be declared against Germany in 873, and this was accordingly fixed as the date for the outbreak of the Nibilist insurrection. The revolutionists did not shrink from any means of promoting their object. They robbed women on the high road to supply the organization with funds, and common oriminals were farnished with tools to enable them to escape from prison. One of these oriminals having asked a Nihilist why he had helped him to escape, the Nihilist replied, " We want every man we can get to put an end to the Czar's Government,"—Pall Mull Gasstie.

GALLANT CONDUCT.

Full particulars have been received in Liver. the abandonment of the British steamer Syria while on a voyage from New Orleans to Liverpool, a brief announcement of which appeared recently. The steamer was under the command of Capt. John E. Johnson, with a Room's Rain. grew of 36 hands. She left New Orleans on the 18th Marchiwith a cargo of 5,017 bales of cotton and 150 tons of oilcake. On the sixth day out a severe gale from the north-west set in huge waves broke over the ship fore and aft, and tora away the bulwarks and gangways in several places. This storm continued until the 27th. when the wind moderated; but nort day began to blow from the S.W.; and shortly after five o'clock in the afternoon the steamer suddenly came up to the wind, and it was then found that the rudder and rudderpost had been carried away. Another attempt was made to steer the ship rigging up some spars pear the stern, but the vessel kept coming up to the wind, and even with the head sails set she would not pay off properly. At this time the Suria was leaking badly owing to the breaking of the discharge pipe, but by means of the steam pumps the water was kept well under for some time. At last however, the water gained rapidly, and the orew seemed disposed to give up their attempts to save the ship. Before daylight on th morning of the 4th inst. the lights of steamer were observed. Night signals were burned from the Syria, and in a short time the Imperial German Mail-steamer Gelleri was alongside the disabled vessel. Captain Johnson asked to be taken in tow, and the vessels were connected by means of the steel hawser of the Gellert and an Il-inch hawser belonging to the Syria. Both hawsers, however were soon broken, and it was found impossible to tow the Syria any further. The crew of Captain Johnson's boat then refused to return to the Syria, and insisted on remaining on board the Gelleri, where they had gone to assist in fixing the hawsers. Captain Johnson appealed to Captain Kirklewen to send some of his own men to work the disable steamer, and one of the officers of the Gellert, with the engineer, was sent to examine the Syria. On their return they reported that the could not remain above water much longer. and that it would be dangerous to send any of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are men on board of her. Under these circumstances. Captain Johnson determined to shandon her, and he and his orew went on board the Gellert, which resumed her voyage and landed them at New York on the 8th instant. A heavy gale set in on the day after the Syria was abandoned; and it was thought that she could not possibly have survived it. The Suria was an iron screw steamer of 1.305 tons net register, built at Southampton in 1863, and owned in Sunderland.

For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have to late years been compelled to soin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy tere given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained; forming overeises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the secents being earefully marked on the best principle hitherto strained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously nd vacant spaces which have heretolors charac- Manila, Singapore, Saigon, Penang, and to all terized Chinese publications...
